IT'S NECK AND NECK IN THIS RACE

PEP AND PERSEVERANCE WILL MAKE A WINNER OF ANY PAY ROLL WORKER!

GOING UP!

Developments during the last 24 hours of the first period in the Semmler Publications Payroll subscription drive were the most sensational and spectacular that have been recorded. Thousands upon thousands of votes were cast; first one worker would hold sway for supremacy, then another; battles were fought, won and lost, and the race waged fast and furious.

Scientists for centuries have been endeavoring to work out a satisfactory answer to the problem "What would happen if an irresistible body would meet an immovable body," and thousands have pondered over what would occur if such an event would actually take place.

Just about the best illustration of that problem is shown right now in the subscription drive as it emerges from the first period and enters the second. A comparison of the leaders in this race show that just about such an event has taken place. Just a few subscriptions would have altered the standing when the first period closed, for a few subscriptions would have placed any of the workers in FIRST POSITION. Seemingly the race is destined to be a "dead heat" but this weeks work will no doubt see some startling changes.

With a vigor and enthusiasm that has never before been witnessed in this community, the Payroll workers have entered upon the second period now fully aware each is pitted against an opponent determined to win.

Actual Test Now Ahead

It is in you to win if you will and this is the final test. These are the days to measure your resourcefulness. Here is where your courage up holds you and makes you fight, or lack of it takes the stiffness out of your knees and leaves you trailing in the dust an "also ran."

'Tis the coward who quits to misfortune;
'Tis the knave who changes each day;
'Tis the fool who wins half a battle

Then throws all his chances away.
The time to succeed is when others
Discouraged, show traces of tire;
The battle is won on the home-stretch;

And won 'twixt the flag and wire.
Votes will pile up rapidly during this and next week that is, while the second period schedule is in effect. The liveliest part of the race is now at hand, and while all the workers are practically on the same footing, at the same time, those who want to and will, are afforded the opportunity of the race to forge ahead and corral the winning votes.

Subscriptions Still Count Big
We want to inform "Payrollers" and their friends that this race will be won by the narrowest of margins. This is indicated soon after the race started, and today it is more apparent than ever before. EVERY SUBSCRIPTION RIGHT NOW WILL COUNT MUCH. The fact that you have subscribed does not keep you from giving your favorite a larger and additional subscription, providing that none are for more than 5 years in advance.

During this period subscriptions still count big. They count for almost as much as during the 1st period, just closed. A one-year subscription will amount to 2,000 votes, while a five-year subscription will amount to 20,000 votes.

Better Be Safe Than Sorry
Just two weeks from Saturday the awards will be made. A few more laps and the race will have been won. Only a short time remains to decide between victory and defeat—success or failure. Don't overlook a single chance to better your chances to win. Avail yourself of the opportunity this period affords. Think and plan constantly for success. Figure ways to win, and always remember that your adversaries, as keen and resourceful as yourself, are racking some very acute brains for the same purpose. AND REMEMBER THE WINNER OF FIRST PLACE IS EARNING MORE THAN

Convert Old Cars Into Tractors

The Cooper & Hostert Garage at Mokena are converting old cars into tractors. Two of these auto tractors have been built and are proving a practical thing. The chassis of an old car was shortened and the wheels were set closer in. The gas tank, battery, drivers seat, etc., were mounted on a floor on top of the chassis and a hook placed in the rear for attaching a plow or cultivator and experiments conducted in a field proved the converted auto-tractor a success. By narrowing the width of the wheel space the converted tractor straddles the corn rows nicely so as not to damage the growing corn. Much interest has been shown by farmers in this rather unique tractor.

The regular automobile wheels and tires are used so the converted tractor can be operated on any kind of road.

Mokena Child Sets New Record

Mary Ann Rinke, 16 months old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Rinke who are touring in Kentucky, has the record of being the youngest sight-seer ever to go thru the dungeons of Mammoth Cave, Kentucky. Mary Ann made the trip with her mother Monday, riding the seven miles in a perambulator and apparently enjoying the trip.

$45.00 A DAY FOR THE THIRTEEN REMAINING DAYS OF THIS RACE.

It means more financial success to win in a race of this kind. It demonstrates a capacity that is extraordinary. It proves the "yellow" in your bogus friends, but it also reveals the true ones and it tests your metal and measures your strength.

FROM NOW ON TO THE FINISH IS THE TIME ONE-HUNDRED PER CENT EFFICIENCY COUNTS MOST.

SUP. C. DOCTOR OF ORLAND TWP. RESIGNS

When the supervisors of Cook County were recently advised that they would have to levy 30 cents on each $100 assessed valuation to take care of local relief cases, Supervisor Charles Doctor of Orland Township felt that he did not want to be a party in plunging his township into debt and also felt that he did not want to handle a lot of difficult cases at his age, so he tendered his resignation to the Orland Township Board, on June 11th, after having served his township in the capacity of supervisor for 16 years.

The Town Board was much surprised when Mr. Doctor sent in his resignation and were reluctant to accept it, but finally did and have appointed Fred E. Yunker as supervisor for the un-expired term of Mr. Doctor.

Mr. Doctor's resignation read as follows:
To the Town Clerk and Honorable Board of Auditors:

Whereas, I do not intend to be a candidate for the office of supervisor at the coming election next April, and in view of the fact the relief has been turned back to the Town, also the fact that the school treasurer's office has three times the work it formerly had, it becomes the honorable duty for me to resign as supervisor of the Town of Orland at once so that the new supervisor which the Town Board will appoint, may begin his duties as overseer of the poor and getting his credentials and instruction on the start from the relief commission, who agree to give the supervisors all necessary help to get started, I therefore tender my resignation to take effect at once.

Thanking the Town Board and the voters of the Town of Orland for standing by me so loyally for the past sixteen years, I am,
Yours sincerely,
Charles Doctor.

Mr. Doctor has turned over the following amounts to his successor in office: $2495.12, Town fund; $904.08, Road and Bridge funds; $285.95, Hard Road fund or a total of $3685.15.

When Mr. Doctor took over the supervisor's office sixteen years ago, the town was $3600 in debt and the Town officers had not been paid for two years. He has set an excellent record during his tenure of office and his constituents are very sorry that he felt obliged to relinquish his office.

Mr. Yunker, the new supervisor, is a well known farmer of Orland township.

Empty Paint Cans Kill Valuable Cows

Empty paint cans considered harmless by most people, have proved to be very deadly to cattle. Of late Dr. McEwan, well known Frankfort veterinarian has had a number of cases where cattle licked the paint adhering to the paint cans and lead poisoning developed causing the death of some valuable cows. Empty cans of any kind should not be thrown where animals can get to them.

Kindergarten Class Is Well Attended

The kindergarten class which Miss Catherine Cunningham of Joliet opened in the Mokena public school the past week was well attended.

The little folk have enjoyed the games, songs, singing games and other features. They have also done some very neat drawing work.

Thru a misunderstanding, many parents have been under the impression that the tuition is free and others thought the tuition would be high. Miss Cunningham states she has set the tuition fee at 75c.

Gooseberries Grow On Tree In Mokena

We have often heard the expression, "I'll climb a tree and leave this earth", and because of the dry weather due to the lack of rain, perhaps that is the reason a gooseberry bush is growing in the fork of a maple tree, in the front yard of the residence of Dr. E. G. McMahon. Anyway, about seven or eight feet above the ground in this tree fork is growing a fine gooseberry bush. Perhaps the birds are to blame, by carrying the seed and it happened to drop there.

SYNTHETIC GENTLEMAN

"You were right in the beginning," Pat said. "There was only one thing to do. Father saw Kelly alive after Peg's husband left him, and we should have said so."

"I can't stand seeing Peggy," Pat continued. "Was that what you had in mind when you sent her here? Anyway, it's too terrible. She comes down to breakfast, looking—well, you know. You knew about trouble like that—all night long—alone—and I didn't. I do now, and we've got to 'come clean.'"

"I don't think it matters," Barry replied. "I still think we can free Jack without that."

"How soon?"

"By next Wednesday."

Pat nodded.

"All right," she said. "We'll wait until Wednesday."

Barry had never seen her more charming.

As they walked down the beach, to rejoin the others, he asked, "Are you ever going to confess how you found out about me?"

Pat laughed.

"That was too easy. The night of Marian's visit, you told me you'd taken the name Barry Gilbert. And it had a curiously familiar sound. After a moment, I remembered that I'd once seen an actor called Barry Gilbert in a war picture."

"And then?"

"Then you shut your hand in the door. The expression of mingled surprise and pain in your face—that was what had kept the picture and the actor in my mind. You were the man who'd come out of the drinking place, laughing and talking, and been shot. I was sure of that—just as sure as I was that you'd crushed your fingers deliberately to keep us from knowing that, unlike the Jack Rider you were supposed to be, you couldn't play a violin any more than you could play Hamlet."

"I'm glad you found out," Barry said. "I'm glad I haven't been deceiving you, at all events."

They had reached the railroad builders.

"Pat!" Jack called. "Pat! We've finished—"

"Jack! You mustn't call Miss Ham-bridge 'Pat'."

"Everybody else does."

"I like it," Patricia called to the rescue. "We're Pat and Peg to each other now; why shouldn't I be Pat to Jacky?"

It was almost a miracle, Barry decided. Was this the same girl of whom, only a couple of months ago, her father had said, "Pat, for short, though it takes courage to call her that."

The change wasn't all his doing, or Peg's. Something else had contributed to softening Pat, and making her sweeter and lovelier. It was ironic, Barry felt, and bitter—that she should be the loveliest when he was losing her. What of his plan to come back for her—"Some day, when I've made good?" A girl like that might marry an ex-vagabond; she certainly couldn't marry an ex-convict.

Barry drove back to town Sunday evening without having put anybody's house in order. He had dined with the Hambridges, and gone over there in the morning "to see Jacky start for his ride."

"Well, our trial's set for two weeks from today," said Winslow when Barry called at his office Monday morning.

"I'm still hoping there won't be any trial."

"Meaning that you think you've got Mrs. Kelly?"

That was the question Barry had dreaded. Winslow's frank amusement at his "sleuthing" nettled him, and made him feel foolish. Especially now that he was compelled to admit, "No; I'm afraid you were right about Mrs. Kelly. She slept at her sister's that night."

"Well, then," Peter asked, "who's the latest candidate?"

"Do you remember reading me your cross examination of the Filipino?"

"A new notes for it—yes."

"You found a lot of holes in the boy's story?"

"Yes."

But Peter was still amused.

"Well, I've got a few more," Barry said, "and a motive."

He sat down, and Peter opposite him. Barry repeated what Evans had told him of the dinner with Nolan.

"Well," Peter remarked, at the end, "that settles the case against Rogers."

"You think so?"

"Obviously. If Nolan sticks to his story. We say Nolan's testimony establishes that the decanter was downstairs all the time Rogers was upstairs. But we've got to make the jury believe it."

"Or the district attorney."

Winslow shook his head.

"The district attorney wouldn't move for dismissal of an indictment on that evidence."

"But—"

"You're perfectly sure that the Filipino killed Kelly?" Winslow went on.

"I'm not. And the district attorney wouldn't be. The Filipino was angry. And the decanter was downstairs. That's all there really is to that story."

"And Kelly was alive an hour after Rogers left."

"That's what we've got to prove to the jury. My own guess is that the decanter had been carried into the dining room when the murderer entered the house."

"After Nolan went home?"

"Yes, and after the Filipino went to bed."

"And that man—"

"You're sure it was a man?"

"Very sure. And that man was someone who had better reason than we've found yet for hating or dreading Mike Kelly."

Barry rose.

Peter had picked a glove off his desk, and was turning it right side out.

"Have you ever thought of Luis Mo-rano?" Barry asked.

Winslow let the glove fall.

"Why?"

"He seems to have had some reason for hating Kelly."

"You mean that row in the Coconut Bar?" Peter said. "Oddly enough, that's why I haven't thought of Mo-rano. He was telephoning me from the Coconut Bar—about the row—at the time of the murder."

"Luis always came to me when he was in trouble. And he called me, at home, just after one that morning, to say that one of his girls was in jail, and would I take the case. I could hear that jazz of his."

Barry stooped for the glove.

"Well, that's that," he remarked.

"Kelly was threatening Morano, you know, and—"

But Peter was smiling again.

"You can make a case against almost anyone," he said. "But a case that'll stand up—that's another thing."

Barry grinned sheepishly.

Winslow pressed a button.

"Stop worrying," he advised Barry.

"We're going to free Rogers. If we have to get the guilty man to do it, we'll get him, but let's give the court a chance first."

"I guess we'll have to," Barry conceded.

Peter's secretary opened the door.

"What's Nolan's first name?" Peter asked Barry.

"And where's his garage? Got it, Miss Clark? Now, get Nolan in here this afternoon."

He looked up at Barry.

"Don't mind my joking," he said.

"Something tells me you did a grand job when you turned up Mr. Nolan."

"Peter's wonderfully kind," Barry told Harwood that evening, "but he makes me feel as small as an author's name in a motion picture advertisement."

"I don't think Winslow means to make anyone feel small," Ernie answered. "He's too big for that. It's the small men who've got to make other people smaller, in self-defense. The trouble with Winslow is that he's generally right, and that's trying, no matter how kind anyone may be about it."

"Winslow's a great lawyer," he went on, "and a swell guy. He's had his own troubles, too. Ever meet his wife?"

"Once."

"He's nearly wrecked his career for her, you know. She ran away from home with some youngster in a military school. The kid turned crook, and the cops killed him. Then she married Winslow. The tabloids played the story up all over the place, and Mrs. Winslow crashed, and had to be taken to Europe. She went to pieces again two or three years ago, and Winslow closed the office, and went to live in the South of France. The money gave out, I guess. Anyway, they didn't stay long. Of course, that telephone message doesn't prove anything."

"You mean Morano's message to Winslow?"

"Yes. Luis might have sent that at one o'clock, and still've been in time for the murder."

"Is there any chance that Luis didn't send it?"

"Why do you ask that?"

"It occurs to me that Peter might be shielding someone."

"Whom? Morano?" Harwood shook his head. "Morano's that kind of a lawyer. As a matter of fact, I know Morano phoned him."

"Who told you?"

"Violet Fane."

"Then you've been to the Coconut Bar?"

"Yes. I went Saturday, and met all your cronies. Miss Fane says Luis followed Peggy Rogers around to the police station, and then came back to the Bar, and called up his lawyer, and drove to Morristown."

"At one o'clock?"

"Yes."

"How about 'faking an alibi'?"

"You reminded me it could be done," Barry went on.

Ernie turned suddenly.

"Ever strike you as queer," he asked, "that nobody ever connected Kelly's murder with the Jefferson Street grab?"

Barry couldn't trust himself to reply.

"They were pulled off about the same time. As I remember it, Judge Hambridge's decision was handed down the day after the killing."

Barry remained silent.

"Kelly stood to make a million or two on that deal," Harwood continued.

"Those Jefferson Street houses were pretty decent once. Then they went stummy. Through agents, Kelly bought 'em in, one by one, for little or nothing, and turned 'em over to a phoney corporation to sell to the city at a huge profit. Some of the original owners may have been a little bit sore, don't you think?"

The conversation was drifting into safer channels, and, relieved, Barry let it flow on.

"As a matter of fact," Harwood resumed, "someone was—very sore. He called me up, the day of the murder, and offered to squeal. He wouldn't give me his name, but he said he'd be here, at ten-thirty that night, to deliver the goods on Kelly."

"And then?"

"Then he didn't show up."

"Somebody got to him."

"Probably. And then somebody killed Kelly."

Barry asked, "Is that the clue you had in mind when you said, 'Tell Winslow I may have a tip for him some day'?"

Harwood nodded.

"Yes, but, as I remarked later, that guy who phoned might have been anybody. I didn't have a darn thing to go on except that he had a soft voice and a funny impediment in his speech."

"And then—"

"Then you told me about Morano, and I went to the Coconut Bar. The guy that phoned me was Morano, all right. But what does that mean? Not a thing, maybe. If Morano did hop in his car at one o'clock that night—"

He paused.

"I've got a dozen men on this trail. Now, I'm going to send somebody to Morristown. Not you. They know you. Your job is to lay low. Morano hasn't the faintest idea who I am. I told him I came from Grand Rapids. But—"

The city editor was pacing the floor.

"My God, how this picture begins fitting together," he cried. "Morano threatens to spill the beans. Someone tells Kelly. Kelly goes to the Coconut Bar. With two strong-arm men. Why? To silence a squealer. That was around eight o'clock, and, at ten-thirty, the squealer didn't squeal. Why? Because Kelly had something on him."

Barry was on his feet, too, now.

"Something in writing," he said.

"Sure! The paper he accused Peggy Rogers of trying to steal."

"Yes," Barry went on, "and get this: somebody did try. Violet Fane, probably. Peggy Rogers says Violet had just left the table when the row started. And that Luis was talking to Vi, outside the dressing rooms, just before that."

"—What did he say? He said, 'I'll send this dame to jail, and you to the hot spot.' And you can't send a man to the electric chair for picking pockets."

"No."

"But you might, if you knew of something else he'd done, and had the proof of it. There was a paper, and it had disappeared when the body was found. Who got it? Morano. And not in the Coconut Bar, because it was still in Kelly's pocket at midnight."

Harwood laid down his pipe.

"How do you know that?"

"Somebody told me."

"Jack Rogers?"

"No."

Harwood's eyes narrowed.

"Was it Judge Hambridge?"

Barry didn't answer.

"If Winslow's shielding anyone it's Judge Hambridge," Harwood said.

"Judge Hambridge, or someone close to him. I've been thinking that ever since you put the idea in my head. The judge has always been a straight shooter. Why did he write that decision? Was that paper a threat to him, too?"

Barry said, "I don't know."

"I don't either. But I'm going to find out before Saturday."

"Can I help?"

Ernie looked at him.

"No," he replied, curtly. "For the present, I want you to keep out of this."

The Junior League

The Junior league originated among a small group of young women in New York city who in 1900 sent a large number of roses from a party to a hospital. Later they and others banded together "for mutual benefit and the good of the community." From giving entertainments for the benefit of a college settlement they extended their activities to many other forms of social aid. Similar organizations of young women were formed in other cities out of which grew a national association of leagues, each interested in its particular ways in the educational, cultural and civic conditions of its community and in volunteer charitable and other service.

Lesson for June 28

REVIEW: JESUS MEETING HUMAN NEEDS

GOLDEN TEXT—Jesus of Nazareth . . . went about doing good.—Acts 10:38.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Our Best Friend.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Because He Lives.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Jesus Meeting My Needs.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Jesus Meeting the World's Needs.

The lessons of the quarter center in one supreme person and have one transcendent theme, Jesus Christ the world's Savior. The best method of review for senior and adult classes will be to refresh the mind with the principal facts and leading teachings of each lesson. The following suggestions are offered:

Lesson for April 5.

The great supper represents God's gracious provision of salvation for mankind. The urgent invitation is extended to all to accept Jesus Christ as Savior. The making of excuses illustrates the sin and folly of men in rejecting God's free grace.

Lesson for April 12.

The resurrection of Jesus Christ is the supreme proof of the deity of Jesus Christ. The empty tomb is the divine guarantee that Christ was what he claimed to be, and that his offering on Calvary's cross was accepted by God.

Lesson for April 19.

The center of interest in this parable is not the prodigal son or his brother, but a certain man who had two sons. He who fails to see the heart of our Father God will miss the purpose of the parable. The whole of revelation as it pertains to a sinning race and a pardoning God is swept before us in this narrative.

Lesson for April 26.

The story of the rich man and Lazarus gives us a look into two worlds. In this world the rich man lived in luxury while Lazarus begged at his door. In the other world, their positions are reversed. Death is coming to rich and poor. Worldly condition is not a test of man's relationship to God. The rich man did not go to hell because he was rich, neither did Lazarus go to heaven because he was poor.

Lesson for May 3.

Forgiveness is a Christian obligation. Humility is a Christian quality. Gratitude is an uncommon grace. The nine lepers who were healed failed to express gratitude to the healer.

Lesson for May 10.

Prayer is an obligation on the part of the believer. Spiritual growth is absolutely impossible without it. Men should pray under all circumstances.

Lesson for May 17.

Zacchaeus brushed aside all difficulties in order to see Jesus. He proved the reality of his conversion by making restitution. He was saved instantly upon receiving Jesus Christ. Salvation is a present reality to those who believe on Jesus Christ.

Lesson for May 24.

Jesus warned against the scribes. They claimed to be loyal to the Word of God yet showed their lack of the saving grace of God. In connection with his teaching in the temple, Jesus prophesied of his return and warned against unpreparedness as to his coming.

Lesson for May 31.

The last meal that Jesus ate with his disciples was the passover, the memorial of the national deliverance which pointed to the supreme deliverance to be effected by Christ on the cross of Calvary. In connection with the passover, the feast of the new covenant was instituted. This feast has a double import, looking backward to the great deliverance wrought through Christ's atoning death and forward to the even greater deliverance which he shall accomplish at his second coming.

Lesson for June 7.

Jesus' indescribable agony in the garden shows what it cost the sinless Son of God to identify himself with the sinning race, when in anguish he sweat as it were great drops of blood.

Lesson for June 14.

The crucifixion of Jesus Christ was the greatest tragedy of all history. May the fact of the sinless Son of God suffering for a sinning race, move all sinners to accept salvation at his hand.

Lesson for June 21.

Jesus, having given the disciples the parting message to evangelize the world, ascended into heaven. May these last words of our Lord be received by us as our supreme obligation to take the gospel to every creature.

The lessons of the entire quarter have been rich in teaching material. A faithful presentation of the Bible messages given should mean conversion for some and growth in grace for many.

Pray Continually

Accustom yourself gradually to carry prayer into all your daily occupations. Speak, move, work, in peace, as if you were in prayer, as indeed you ought to be. Do everything without excitement, by the spirit of grace.—Fenelon.

Great Designs

Great designs are not accomplished without enthusiasm of some sort. It is the inspiration of everything great. Without it no man is to be feared, and with it none despised.—Bovee.

STAR DUST

Movie • Radio

★ ★ ★ By VIRGINIA VALE ★ ★ ★

THERE'S nothing like keeping your business all in the family! Gene Markey wrote a scenario, "By the Dawn's Early Light," (and can't you see that title being shortened so that it will fit theater marquees?) and RKO has bought it for his wife, Joan Bennett, which is nice as he wrote it especially for her. Fred Stone will be the other star. It sounds pretty exciting. Stone will play an American consul stationed in China. Joan will be his daughter, and a revolution will furnish the drama. Joan is making a picture in England now, and is eager to get home and begin work in her husband's story.

It rather startled everyone to have Myrna Loy and Arthur Hornblow getting their romantic affairs straightened out at last; there have been rumors of a matrimonial nature about them for a long time. Hornblow and his wife, the lovely Juliet Crosby, had separated, but he had been opposed to a divorce. (Meanwhile Hollywood gossips were rushing about, saying that it was just too dreadful that his wife wouldn't divorce him so that he and Myrna could be married!) Eventually Mrs. Hornblow went to Reno, and after that it was plain sailing.

Myrna Loy

Don't refer to Buster Crabbe as Buster any more; he doesn't like it. He got the studio to let him be Larry Crabbe, but they insisted on putting "Buster" in the middle, and now he's known by all three names. He's working in "The Arizona Raiders" for Paramount, with Marsha Hunt.

Warner Brothers and Paul White-man have joined forces in an effort to discover talented children. Children from all over the country will appear with Whiteman on his radio broadcasts each week, and be given tests at the Brooklyn Vitaphone studio.

Warner Brothers will also make a series of shorts, the casts to be composed entirely of children. And of course any children who make the grade will be under contract to Warner Brothers.

While we're on the subject of children, the settlement of the squabble over little Freddie Bartholomew is good news. Apparently he didn't want to leave his beloved aunt, who had done so much to develop his talent and taken such good care of him, yet naturally his mother couldn't be denied her rights. His aunt said recently that she was disturbed over the effect the whole thing had had on him; he forgot his lines when he was working, a thing he had never done before, and had told her that, if he was taken away from her, he'd run away and keep running away until he got back to her.

Mokena Orioles

Defeat Married Men

Last Sunday the Orioles played one of Mokena's fastest and peepiest teams the so called "Married Men."

The Orioles had some tough competition up to the 2nd inning when they started hitting and scored five runs to put them in the lead of 5-3 after which George Lauffer's masterly twirling held them to only four more hits. Phil Hacker was the twirler for the married men and showed he had what it takes to pitch ball. A few errors on both teams were responsible for a few runs but the Orioles finally were the victors by a score of 10 to 7.

Mrs. W. B. Combs

Garden Club Guest

Mrs. Wallace B. Combs, Tinley Park, Ill., guest president of the Garden club of Illinois, was guest speaker at the last meeting of the Beach Garden club held in the home of Mrs. Frederick L. Fake, Villa Rose, Long Beach.

Complimenting the club on its splendid work, Mrs. Combs stated: "I have rarely seen a more beautiful town than Long Beach. The Beach Garden club in its civic work for the community is doing a major service. With this dynamo, Mrs. Matthew Woll, club president, back of you, you will accomplish big things."

The members, at the suggestion of Mrs. Phil A. Howard, West Wind, answered to roll call with garden news. This will be a regular feature at all meetings. Interesting information was given by Mrs. George H. Holt, Beltramento, who grows pansies that are the envy of all. "In picking pansies," said Mrs. Holt, "be sure to cut an entire branch and as close to the ground as possible, thus causing the plant to spread and become strong."

Special Grass Seed

Mrs. I. S. Purcell, White Cloud, responded with information concerning the successful results obtained from planting a special grass seed recommended to the club by Carl Becker, who is affiliated with the Garfield Park Conservatory in Chicago.

Mrs. Fake, the club secretary, told of a warning given by Clark Nattkemper, graduate of the DePaul university in plant pathology. "When collecting wild flower plants, make certain before digging that there are at least a dozen others of the same species in the group. Otherwise our native wild flowers will soon become extinct."

A new member was welcomed into the group, Mrs. Holland C. Pile, of Tinne Hinch, (Little Hill). The next meeting will be held June 25 in the home of Mrs. W. H. Johnson, Peak O'Dean.

Telling Time at Night

Mrs. Green bought a sundial at a sale and had it erected in her garden. She called in the builder and instructed him to move it to a more suitable place. "Where would you like me to put it?" asked the builder. "Under the electric lamp in the porch," she replied. "Then we shall be able to see the time when it's dark."—Pearson's Weekly.

Quite So

The fisherman saw what looked to be a likely pool and turned to a man lounging on the bank. "Is it a crime to catch fish here?" he asked. "Crime?" was the retort. "If you catch any it'll be a miracle."

Ann—The sermon was very good, wasn't it? Sue (absently)—No, I didn't like her outfit a bit, both her hat and her gown were impossible.

MAMA KNOWS

"But, Mother, Jim's my soul mate." "Tut, tut, daughter, don't be foolish. Just because two young people happen to like the same movies, it doesn't necessarily mean that they were made for each other."

"And Jesus Came Preaching," Of the many activities of Jesus' life, not the least important and significant were his preaching and teaching. He felt he had a message which just must be proclaimed. It was no either-or proposition with him: he must speak his word.

That message we have traditionally called the gospel. A modern writer suggests that it is "the gospel of an offer and the gospel of a demand." Next Sunday morning, as we continue our study of the life of Jesus, we shall think together about the central items in this message of Jesus. It may be we shall discover that all too often we have omitted some of the items which Jesus considered so important. Dare we preach a complete Christian gospel?

Are there some questions you would like discussed from the pulpit, relative to the life and teachings of Jesus? We shall be very glad to try to answer your questions, if you will write them out and hand them to the minister.

This church stands for a liberal, intelligent, and we hope courageous interpretation of religion. We invite all people of the Tinley Park community who are looking for such a church to share our worship and our social relations. The minister will be glad to call at your home if you will send him word.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"God the Preserver of Man" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, June 14.

The Golden Text was, "Fear thou not; for I am with thee: be not dismayed; for I am thy God: I will strengthen thee; yea, I will help thee; yea, I will uphold thee with the right hand of my righteousness" (Isaiah 41:10).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "They that trust in the Lord shall be as Mount Zion, which cannot be removed, but abideth for ever. As the mountains are round about Jerusalem, so the Lord is round about his people from henceforth even for ever" (Psalms 125:1, 2).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science Textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "In divine Science, man is sustained by God, the divine Principle of being. The earth, at God's command, brings forth food for man's use. Knowing this, Jesus once said, 'Take no thought for your life, what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink,'—presuming not on the prerogative of his creator, but recognizing God, the Father and Mother of all, as able to feed and clothe man as He doth the lilies" (p. 530).

Great Lakes Exposition Opens Saturday, June 27

WITH bands playing, thousands of gay-colored pennants whipping in the lake breeze, and with massive exhibit structures shimmering in the sunlight, countless numbers of eager spectators will pass through the towering pylon-entrances of the Great Lakes Exposition when that gigantic 150-acre fair opens its doors on Cleveland's lakefront next Saturday.

Opening day activities at the fair, which celebrates Cleveland's hundredth birthday and one hundred years of progress in the vast trade empire of the Great Lakes area, will be given over to a panorama of colorful festivities and special events. Radio broadcasts in the afternoon and evening will bring to the nation the news of the opening.

At night, the huge Exposition will be a gorgeous fantasy of illumination. These lights will be turned on by the "man in the moon." As the rays of the moon flash on the "eye" of a powerful telescope, an impact of light will strike a photo-electric cell, which in turn transmits the impulse to switches controlling the lights.

For visitors to the Great Lakes Exposition there is a vast variety of free entertainment. From the huge orchestral shell, directly north of the fair's main entrance on St. Clair avenue, will come the melodious strains of concert music played by the Great Lakes Symphonic orchestra of 100 pieces.

Opposite the Plaza and inside Cleveland's beautiful Public Hall, scene of the recent Republican National Convention, will be the Exposition's Radioland. Here, in the largest broadcasting studio in the world, visitors will see and hear the greatest stars and acts on the radio networks.

In the Municipal Stadium, the gorgeous Marine Theater built on the lake, and in the two main exhibit buildings, the Automotive Building and the Hall of Progress, visitors will find all types of free attractions, ranging all the way from sports to interesting, educational exhibits.

Following the winding roads that lead throughout the entire Exposition area, spectators will see the marvelous Court of Presidents, its sides lined with golden eagles dedicated to the presidents born in, or elected from, the Great Lakes states.

Bedtime Story for Children

BOBBY COON AND BILLY MINK
PUT THEIR HEADS TOGETHER

WHEN Billy Mink cried "Stop!" Bobby Coon stopped. He stopped with one paw lifted and just ready to put down in the middle of the little opening in that fence which had so puzzled him. He turned his head to look back at Billy Mink. "Why should I stop?" he demanded, and he spoke rather crossly.

"Because if you take one more step forward, it will be the last step you ever will take," snapped Billy.

Bobby didn't take that forward step. Instead he backed away in such a hurry that it really was funny. You would have thought he had burned his toes. Then he turned around to face Billy Mink. "What sort of nonsense is this?" he growled. "I don't see anything wrong."

Billy grinned. "You may not see anything wrong," said he, "but if you had put your foot down in that little opening you would have felt something wrong. Yes, indeed, you would have felt something wrong. You certainly would. There is a trap hidden there. I suspect it was set for me, but I guess the trapper who set it would almost as soon catch you as me."

Bobby Coon blinked and looked very hard at Billy Mink to see if he were fooling. When he saw the angry red in Billy's eyes he knew that Billy wasn't fooling. "Goodness, that was a narrow escape!" exclaimed Bobby. "I'm ever so much obliged to you, Billy Mink. I hope that some day I can do something for you. If you hadn't happened along tonight I guess I would be in a terrible fix right now. Do you suppose that trapper built that little fence?"

"Of course," retorted Billy Mink. "He built it so that the only way of going up or down the Laughing Brook without taking a lot of trouble would be to go through that little opening."

"Let's Go Back to That Old Log There and Talk It Over," Said He.

LIFE ENDED AT

Back longer than I can remember now. Not since Ben Harrison lived, anyhow. Bill Bryan he was slow arriving at The place he started for, but did do that:

Set men a fashion, set the country free From long gray whiskers like they used to be.

Why, I remember when I was a lad The solemn habits that our fathers had:

When they got forty, then their days were through.

All there was left for any man to do Was get religion, sit around the store, And raise long whiskers, and the times deplore.

Their dress grew sombre as their fifties neared, A woman mostly black, man mostly beard.

To be granddad was to be all done, Or often even have a married son.

A man of forty let his whiskers grow For fear that other people wouldn't know.

A man without them couldn't hope to win

A public office, looking full of sin. The Bible pictures, all authorities, Agreed on whiskers for old chaps like these.

"Life ends at forty," was the motto then, Divided elders from the younger men. Now, if a mustache, even that we doff, At forty tell the barber, "Shave it off." Man's life has lengthened ten or twenty years, And all because the whisker disappeared.

NEW KITCHEN STOVE
MAKES ITS OWN GAS

Housewives Marvel at Coleman Range That Lights Instantly Like City Gas—Cooks a Meal with 2c Worth of Fuel

A new kitchen range that offers every cooking convenience of the finest city gas range is now available to housewives, wherever they live.

W. C. Coleman, pioneer inventor of gas-pressure appliances, brings to a lifetime of inventive genius his crowning achievement in this amazing new Coleman Safety Range. This new stove makes its own gas from ordinary, lead-free gasoline. A patented method of carburization converts liquid fuel into gas, much the same as in present day automobile engines.

The Coleman Range lights instantly, like city gas. Its fuel-saving Band-A-Blu Burners, another of Mr. Coleman's outstanding developments, produce a clean, clear-blue flame, so hot that a low flame does all ordinary cooking. Tests show an average family meal for five takes about 2c worth of fuel. Coleman Ranges are finished in gleaming porcelain enamel. Their pleasing colors combine outstanding beauty with unequalled performance.

Readers of this paper wishing full information about these wonderful new Coleman Ranges will receive beautifully illustrated literature and a valuable stove check chart by simply addressing a postcard to Mr. W. C. Coleman, Dept. WU-236, Wichita, Kansas.—Adv.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
By WILLIAM BRUCKART
NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D. C.

WASHINGTON.—Dr. Francis E. Townsend's fanciful dream for payment of pensions of $200 per month for everyone over sixty years of age seems to have gone up in smoke, but there are developments in connection with the California doctor's unworkable scheme that merit comment. The good doctor and his half-baked idea have been skidding rapidly since the House investigating committee showed up the plan as a befuddled idea and as I once predicted, the bubble burst in a big way.

While I am inclined to believe that Dr. Townsend was honest and sincere in proposing the $200 per month pension, it was the sort of thing that serves as an inducement for racketeers to gather. It was the old molasses barrel for the flies in the world of racketeers. It never had a chance to go anywhere and never will, because it was fundamentally unsound. We can dismiss it then except for the two phases which ought to be vigorously condemned by right-thinking people everywhere.

The two circumstances which I hear discussed most frequently are: The tragedy, the heartaches, that obviously follow in the wake of "movements" such as the Townsend plan that cannot succeed and that draw to themselves thousands, if not hundreds of thousands, of persons who believe they are going to benefit; and secondly, it seems to me that the House committee, headed by Representative Bell, of Missouri, overplayed its hand with the result that it has brought upon House committees the same public disgust and distrust as characterizes 90 per cent of the Senate investigations.

Each of these conditions is to be deplored. Each is definitely destructive. There can be no more excuse for some of the methods employed by the House committee in crucifying Dr. Townsend than for Dr. Townsend himself to wreck hearts and hopes and homes by pushing forward such a miserably impossible proposition as his $200 per month pension program.

The House committee had within its power opportunity to do a magnificent job in exposing the racketeering that become part and parcel of the Townsend plan. It had within its hands the capacity to educate millions within the United States against following such an illusion, such a mirage, as the Townsend plan. If it had confined itself to that work, Representative Bell and his committee should receive the plaudits of the nation. But the sad story is that the committee under Mr. Bell's guidance allowed itself to become an agency of prosecution, even persecution, rather than an unbiased investigating unit, determined only to obtain the truth.

Since there never was any question that the Townsend nostrum would fall of its own weight eventually, it is difficult to understand why the committee resorted to the tactics it used. I watched some of those hearings. As the committee delved deeper into the activities of Dr. Townsend and his associates, it became infuriated. That was where it made its big mistake and it is going to be quite a long time before House committees again can have a reputation throughout the country of conducting unbiased and reasonable investigations.

Dr. Townsend was sufficiently "hard boiled" to justify the committee in making a vigorous investigation. He was sufficiently indifferent to their offers or hints of co-operation to warrant a feeling on the committee's part that they had to "bear down." Yet, it must be said the committee went beyond all reason and I imagine that in the end it will flare back on the individuals.

Now, Dr. Townsend surely cannot blame anyone other than himself for the fact that he is faced with proceedings by the United States attorney. It will be remembered, of course, that Dr. Townsend deliberately walked out of the committee and refused to testify. That has always been held as contempt and Congress has the right to punish for contempt. In this instance, the House of Representatives elected to turn Dr. Townsend's case over to the United States attorney for punishment in court rather than to employ a House vote which might send the elderly dreamer to jail.

Further, the whole Townsend investigation has turned out to be something of a mess like the Townsend plan itself.

Thus, there is every evidence of a second type of politics in this investigation. The evidence of politics lay in the fact that the House voted the inquiry largely because many of the individual House members were afraid, they were too cowardly, to take a definite stand in their home districts against the Townsends. True, they did not know how strong the Townsend movement was. So, as politicians always do, they dodged the issue and moved to expose it through the medium of a House investigation rather than fight individually to show how ridiculous, how unsound, the plan was.

Having set up the picture showing an utterly impossible program on the part of Dr. Townsend and his associates and followers, the House politicians were confronted suddenly by Dr. Townsend's arrogance in his refusal to testify. That presented a sudden change in the scenery. To explain the dangers in this new problem, it is only necessary to say that if the House had acted promptly by voting that Dr. Townsend was in contempt and must spend some time in jail, I expect the result would have been martyrdom for Dr. Townsend. Martyrdom is always bad from a political standpoint if the opposition has the martyr.

The house, therefore, has turned over the affair to the courts and the courts, being slow moving as they always are, will not get around to prosecution of the case until it is too late to have any influence on the election. So we can see readily that Dr. Townsend is left out in the cold. He can neither use the influence that is characteristic of martyrdom nor can he say that his skirts are clear. The house has left him hanging conveniently in mid-air and it was done solely for political reasons.

There may be some more hearings on the Townsend plan during the summer but the chances are that Representative Bell will not call the committee together again for some months. Practically, the case is closed. It has undoubtedly stopped to a large measure the drain that the Townsend organization was making on the unthinking, the aged and the destitute whose quarters, dimes and nickels have financed the thing thus far. While the committee did a good job by exposing the character of the scheme, I still am doubtful that it has brought to itself or to the house of representatives any fresh confidence in our governmental structure.

The national capital, along with many other sections of the country, has been listening to the purring of hordes of "locusts."

I use the word locusts in quotation marks because they are not really locusts. They are cicadas but to the most of us they are and will remain the seventeen-year locusts.

It is said that the first colonists in America, never before having met with the insects and believing that everything of God's creation was accounted for in the Bible, concluded they were locusts and the name has stuck. In any event, they appear in greatest numbers at seventeen-year intervals and 1936 seems to be a banner year.

Back in 1919, trees in many sections of the country were pierced by tiny saw-like instruments which the Department of Agriculture says are part of the equipment of the female cicadas. Billions of eggs were deposited under the soft bark. A month or two later, grubs emerged on the branches and dropped unnoticed to the earth.

Then, the chronology of the life of these cicadas becomes a matter of darkness for seventeen long years. The insect in grub form burrowed itself in the soil and subsisted on the juices of roots. As far as anyone knows they did little or no harm but after sixteen years and a few months of this life, the grubs awoke this spring and out they came. They acted on instinct, of course.

Through the last several weeks these great beetle-like bugs with wings like isinglass have been humming and drumming and leaving their empty shells attached to trees and grasses.

During that period, the males have spent their daylight hours singing. The Department of Agriculture is not quite sure why this singing has gone on because it has ascertained that all of the lady cicadas are quite deaf.

Perhaps I have devoted too much space to the story of the seventeen-year locust. Perhaps the seventeen-year locust is not important at all except to the robins and the starlings and the sparrows and the other birds which have had a feast in 1936 that almost no other bird now living has known. But I have a thought about these seventeen-year locusts, a train of thoughts, in fact. They lead to this:

What will conditions be in 1953, or seventeen years hence when those humans on earth will hear again the mating song of the locusts?

Will the policies and the principles initiated by Franklin D. Roosevelt and called "the New Deal" be firmly imbedded as American traditions or will they be cast out as impractical and forgotten? Will the changes in civilization be such that people will be willing to submit to regimentation, to have their government tell them what to do and how to do it, or will this nation be a nation of individuals who insist upon the rights and the privileges which the founders of our country believed to be just and right?

TALL TALES

ELMO SCOTT WATSON

The Trolling Frog Tragedy

BECAUSE he's so desperately fond of frog's legs, Albert Mackey of Detroit once owned the biggest bull frog that ever croaked a love song.

Albert landed the Goliath near Grass Lake Mich., and it measured 28 1/2 inches and weighed precisely three pounds, four ounces.

Albert kept the giant alive simply because it spurred his appetite just to look at his pet. He named it Frenchy.

When Albert owned Frenchy 28 days to the hour he permitted the frog a daily swim in the lake. When he gave a certain peculiar whistle, here the frog would come, plowing the water like a destroyer.

An adventurously hungry fish followed Frenchy home from his swim one day, nipping at his aft propellers and spurring Al's pet leviathan to strenuous efforts. That gave Al an idea and it wasn't long until a little harness was fitted on the frog's body. Then Al attached two short lengths of fishing line and a couple of good-sized hooks with spinners and sent Frenchy out trolling.

The very first trial, a two-pound bass struck. Al whistled and Frenchy, churning the water desperately, beached his prize. It was easy then. Frenchy learned to troll the most likely places, edges of weed beds, around lily pads and windfalls—he'd even dive into deep holes where bass lurked.

Course, nothing's permanent. Unknown to all, a fierce muskellunge inhabited Grass Lake. Al had sent Frenchy foraging when he saw the muskie dive at the frog, gulp mightily and vanish with him, not to reappear.

"I'd a-whistled him home," said Albert sadly. "But we'd put some persimmons on ice and I was testing them. Darn it all, my lips puckered on me."

And it's well known in Detroit that out of respect for his frog, Albert Mackey hasn't eaten another persimmon since that dreadful day.

Saved by a Sonnet

GRANDPAP MORGAN was a frontier publisher in Texas, but he had his most thrilling adventure before he ever reached the Lone Star state," says Frank Morgan, printer and proofreader in many a shop throughout the Middle West. This is his story of that adventure:

The wagon train which Grandpap Morgan had joined with his old Army press, his cases of type and other equipment, got safely through the Indian country until it came to the crossing of the Cimarron river. There a big war party jumped them.

For more than three hours the emigrants kept the redskins at bay. Then a whisper of fear ran among the defenders. Their bullets were almost exhausted. As their fire slackened and died down, the savages began massing for a final charge.

Just as the emigrants were getting ready to throw down their useless rifles and draw their Bowie knives, Grandpap Morgan shouted: "Wait! Wait! . . . Quick, one of you fellows . . . help me get the type locked up in this form . . . it's all ready to print when I get to Texas, but it won't get printed anyway if the Indians kill me now. Here, men, fill your guns!"

As they rammed home the pieces of lead type, a ringing war-whoop and the drumming of swift pony hoofs on the hard prairie told of the savage charge that was coming.

"Now!" shouted Grandpap Morgan. A blast of fire from fifty rifles, and the racing ponies were jerked to a halt. A moment later the redskins, screeching with rage, were racing away in mad retreat over the hills.

Grandpap Morgan grinned. "I knew that would turn the trick," he said. "A column and a half of spring poetry . . . they just couldn't stand it!"

Ever Meet a High-Behind?

MANY a tenderfoot has protected the camp from a high-behind, but not one of them has seen this fabulous beast.

The high-behind, as all Westerners know, is equipped with a stiff tail, the end of which was fashioned like a posthole digger.

The chief delight of the high-behind was to turn on its back, balance on the tail and spin madly in circles. Of course you understand the rotary action of this indulgence bored a hole in the ground into which the high-behind invariably disappeared.

Night duties of a tenderfoot frequently included replenishment of condensed milk cans around the camp. This was the favorite food of the high-behind. The beast opened the cans with his metal tail and after three drinks was lulled into such abiding peace that the camp was safe for the night from his attacks.

Forest Air Pure

Forest air is pure because the leaves of the trees act as a filter, catching most of the dust and bacteria that would otherwise pollute it. Moreover, a forest has a definite hygienic influence on the land around it, a fact that has been confirmed by a number of villages in India which have never been attacked during cholera epidemics in their district due to their being surrounded by dense, protecting woods.—Collier's.

Those little tile tables which are such a help in summer entertaining are now so reasonably priced that you can easily indulge in two or more. Those made of tiles are especially nice.

Try this method of watering hybrid tea roses all during the summer. With a can opener remove both ends from a tin can, then sink can, one open end down, into the ground. Turn hose into cans and occasionally liquid manure.

Dry the outside of ice trays after filling with water and before putting back into a mechanical refrigerator. If this is done trays will not stick and may be easily removed.

TINLEY PARK

Last Monday Mrs. L. Goessel at Niles, Michigan was pleasantly surprised when Mr. and Mrs. J. Kefeler, Mr. and Mrs. A. Mesenbrink and Mr. and Mrs. Clemens went to spend the day with her. Talking, eating, bathing and even sleeping were the diversions of the day.

Last Tuesday, a group of friends surprised Mr. and Mrs. J. Kefeler in honor of their wedding anniversary. Bunco was played and refreshments were served. Mrs. Walter Mesenbrink, on behalf of the guests presented Mr. and Mrs. Kefeler a lovely bouquet of flowers. Those present beside the host and hostess were: Mr. and Mrs. Walter Mesenbrink, Mr. and Mrs. Clemens, Mrs. Klann, Mrs. Moss, Grandma Hick and Mrs. Yarmark.

The R. N. A. met Tuesday night and held their regular social meeting. A mock wedding furnished entertainment. Mrs. A. Mesenbrink was the groom; Mrs. A. Clemens, the bride; Mrs. L. Rodgers, the minister; Bernetta Wannamacher, the ring bearer and Mrs. W. Mesenbrink, the maid-of-honor. The bride wore the usual lace veil, trimmed with beets, onions, and radishes and carried a shower bouquet of cabbage leaves, radishes and streamers of yellow pop corn. The minister wore a plugged hat. Mrs. Florence Anderson staged the show; Mrs. Alice Anderson played the wedding march and Mrs. Ceithamel sang, "I Love You Truly". No wedding trip was taken. As the curtain was lowered, the Prisoner's song was sung.

Mrs. Wm. Wannamacher entertained the sewing club Monday.

Mr. Gene Kupp who is ill, is improving nicely.

Our tonsorial artist, Walter Mancke, has had the interior of his barbershop, re-decorated.

The R. N. A. Juveniles were given a picnic by the Senior R. N. A., in Boeyer wood last Saturday. The weather was ideal, as well as the lunch. Games were played. The lake was especially enjoyed. The youngsters are looking forward to another picnic.

Grandma Hick entertained the Tinley Park Bunco club in her home Thursday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. I. Stover and daughter, Opal, attended the wedding Saturday of our local school teacher, Miss Kinman.

Miss Patsy Bagby has gone to Florida to spend the summer with her aunt.

Mrs. Bagby of Nebraska is visiting in the home of her son Raleigh Bagby.
